Thank you for your letter of 15 April inquiring about a possible position as Scholar-in-Residence with the Agency. I circulated your letter and resume throughout the various offices of the National Foreign Assessment Center that deal, even peripherally, with your field of expertise. Several officers noted that your credentials were indeed impressive but none of them were able, at this time, to offer you a position as Scholar-in-Residence. Conceivably, our needs may change within a year or two and you might wish to stay in touch with this office. I would also suggest that you consider offering your services to other organizations within the intelligence community.

Once again, thank you for your letter and your implicit expression of continued interest in the mission of this Agency.

Sincerely yours,

Coordinator for Academic Relations and External Analytical Support
